Nancy Russell (pictured above), was the winner of the "Name the Yearbook Contest." Following is her reason for choosing "HARMONY" as a name for the yearbook:

"I chose the name HARMONY because I believe RCC represents harmony. There are many races, ethnicities, and cultures represented at RCC, both in the student body and faculty as well as staff. All are working together toward common goals, education and freedom. Ultimately education brings about freedom. Harmony means joint agreement and accord. In music harmony means a combination of simultaneous musical notes into a complete chord. Isn't that what RCC is all about? What could be a better name for our yearbook than HARMONY?"

DEDICATED TO THE MEMORY OF PROFESSOR YVONNE CELESTE FORREST

June 2, 1947-June 21, 1988
by Lorraine Fowlkes,
Class of '88

While the forty year old life time of Prof. Yvonne Forrest was relatively short, it was extremely meaningful.

She was born in Brooklyn, New York and raised in Dorchester, Massachusetts. She attended Roxbury Community College, Boston State College and U. Mass-Amherst, where she earned her Bachelor's and Master's degrees. In addition, she often spoke enthusiastically about continuing her education to the doctorate level.

Some students said she was tough, but she really wasn't. She taught from her heart and not just her books. "Never give up your dreams," was one of her many motivating messages. Her love for the mission of Roxbury Community College was what brought her back to teach at R.C.C. Even though she had a deeply rooted concern for her people, she also worked hard toward her vision of a better life for all people. She was a true teacher and activist for social change. The strength of her discipline and the accuracy of her politics will live on in the memories of her family, friends and colleagues.

THE MOVE

by Rosalind Jones,
Editor

The moving day finally came. Roxbury Community College was to move to its new and permanent location. The month of January (1987) was when some of the equipment and furniture was moved to its new location.

There was some who were eager for the move and others were somewhat ambivalent. What would the move entail? Would the school be able to maintain the open atmosphere that exists between faculty and students? Would everything be ready when we got there? These were just a few of the questions that students, faculty and administrators were asking.

Those students who were around during the move (which was the Spring 1987 break) had the opportunity to hear some professors (a few have been here since R.C.C.'s inception) administrators who were here for many years reminisce about the changes that R.C.C. went through. In these pages the Yearbook Committee will try to show you the various changes that R.C.C. has gone through.

WHY I CAME TO TEACH AT R.C.C.

by Angel Alberto Amy-Moreno, Ph.D.,
Professor

I came to Boston in January, 1975 to pursue my doctoral studies at Boston University directly from Puerto Rico, where I was a college professor at the University of Puerto Rico in Arecibo.

Studying at Boston University, I was attracted to R.C.C. because, at the time, R.C.C. was a developing institution which had been established by the state to serve the needs and aspirations of community residents. In addition, it was the only post-secondary institution with a Spanish bilingual program. I came to the college, rendered my application and the same day I was interviewed . . . Several days afterwards I was interviewed by Dean of Faculty Mason and I was hired!

Unfortunately, when the 1975-76 semester opened, Dean Mason had resigned and the Personnel Office did not have my papers on file. For two weeks I waited until the student leader of the Hispanic Student Union (later U.E.L.A.) met with the students and informed them that Dean Sullivan had indicated to her that, due to budgetary restraints, several courses taught in Spanish had to be cancelled until the Spring semester. After the meeting with the dean, the students called a student demonstration outside the institution. Instantly the local press came and interviewed some of the leaders. Two hours afterwards, I was called by the President of the college at the time, Walter Smith, to offer me a teaching position but, with the understanding that I had to start teaching that same day!

When I came to R.C.C., I had high hopes about the college, the students and the community. The fact that we had the potential to develop and implement a full-fledged bilingual program also attracted me. Since the first day of my arrival at the college I felt the "esprit de corps," the professionalism and devotion as well as a deeper commitment and concern for producing the best educational opportunities for our students. I firmly believe that R.C.C. has always maintained a very distinguished and dedicated faculty. Through the years this has been proven many times. In very critical periods of our history it has been said many times, administrators tend to come and go, but the faculty stays longer, giving a sense of security and continuity to our existence.

What I have enjoyed most about R.C.C. is the fact that we are a multi-lingual/multi-cultural community serving the needs of so many different students that come to us from Boston as well as from many remote villages and cities across the world. We represent a truly multi-cultural society and in this sense we are one of a kind, not only throughout New England but throughout the nation as well.

TWENTY YEARS OF STRUGGLES

by Rosalind Jones
Editor

It took TWENTY YEARS before a permanent home was established for Roxbury Community College. It was TWENTY YEARS of struggles, legislation, demonstrations, budget cuts and bureaucratic red tape.

In spite of the obstacles and unforeseen problems that R.C.C. has encountered, it has survived and has grown in student population, curriculum and of course faculty and administration.

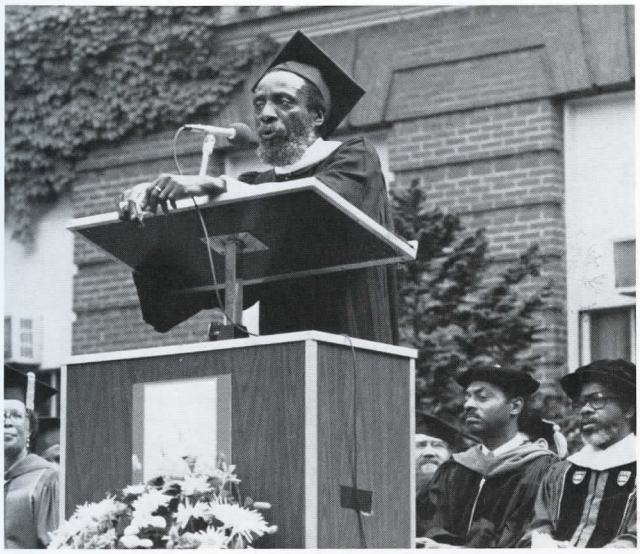

Those of you who know and understand the problems that R.C.C. has had and the metamorphosis that R.C.C. has experienced have an obligation to tell the new incoming people (students and faculty, etc.) how Roxbury Community College came to be where it is today.

The new people need to know of R.C.C.'s history so that they can develop an appreciation for R.C.C.'s struggle: The TWENTY YEARS struggle.

REFLECTIONS ON LEADERSHIP

by Sheiry Smith,
Student Activities Dir.

Roxbury Community College should serve as a greenhouse for the development of the greater Roxbury community. It should be an institution where Roxbury's future leadership is nurtured and cultivated and prepared to lead our people to face the significant challenges that confront us.

The educational experience at R.C.C. should not only give students a thorough grounding in the subject matter necessary for their professional development. It should also help them to understand the qualities that will enable them to be leaders in the human development of themselves, their families and their community.

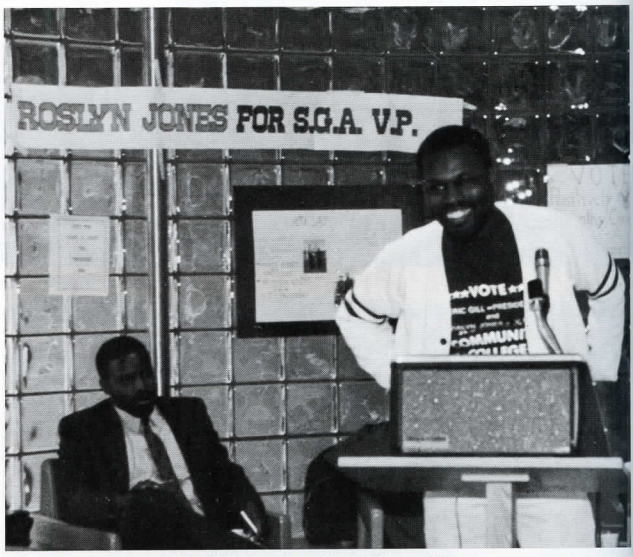

R.C.C.'s leadership — staff, faculty, student government and student organizations should continually strive to have their daily interactions with students serve as a modeling of the qualities of leadership that we believe should be carried into the community. Students at R.C.C. should learn by example that leaders don't glorify themselves, but constantly strive to help others understand their own individual brilliance and ability to make a unique contribution to the world.

Leaders are not born; they are developed through loving care and attention. All human beings have the potential to provide leadership for self, family, and community. R.C.C.'s unique challenge is to develop an atmosphere and a process that brings out this potential.

I'm very satisfied with what Roxbury Community College has provided me all these years. It was a very good idea for me to attend R.C.C. right after I left high school because I'm well prepared to attend any college now.

I would urge any student who plans to attend a four-year institution to come to Roxbury Community College before going to any other school.

The first day I came to Roxbury Community College I thought it was just another school. But as time progressed, I found out that it was not just another school, it was a foundation, a foundation that nurtures and builds esteem in those who pass through its halls. R.C.C. Its initials mean more than just a name. It's a name that is rich in culture and class.

R.C.C. has opened my awareness to my own and other's cultures and has helped me to appreciate my class, my style, and my very own potential!

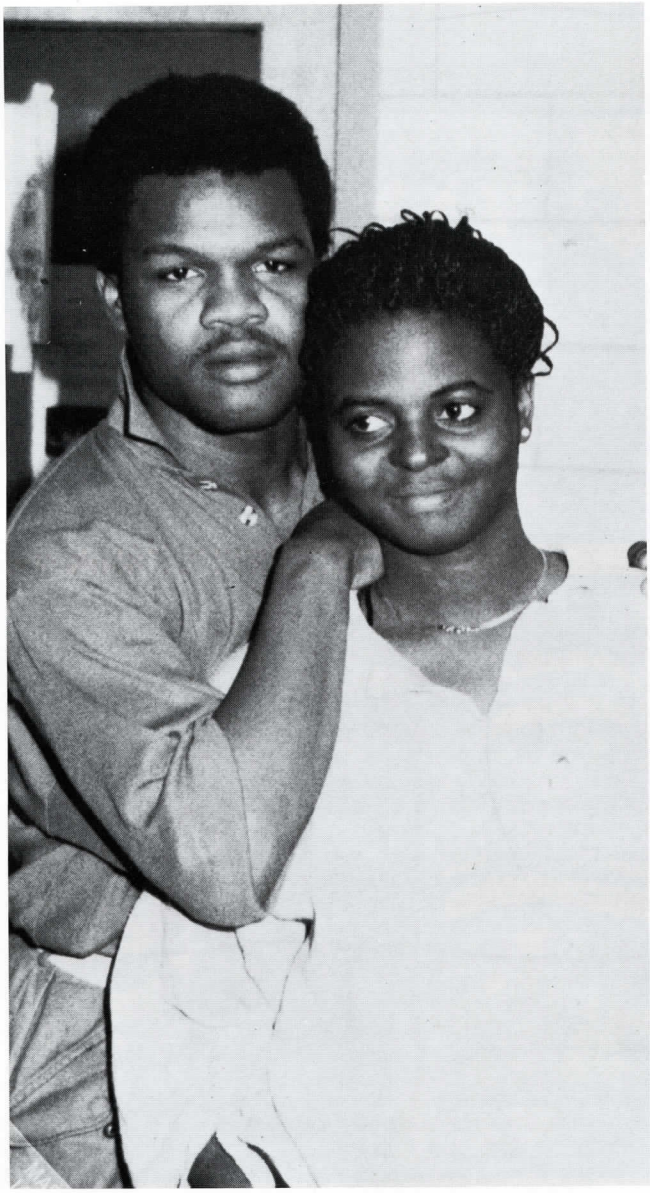

R.C.C. is the place to be, a foundation — not a stepping stone.

R.C.C. means a lot to me, I'll always remember the professors, administrators, etc.

THE FINALE

by Rosalind Jones
Editor

The evening was tense and exciting. Every where I looked I saw happy faces. Proud faces.

As the graduates marched down the aisle you couldn't help but be proud of what you saw.

Graduates could be overheard saying which professor(s) they would miss and how glad they were that it was finally over. No more R.C.C. All over the Hynes Auditorium could be heard promises students made to each other to keep in touch.

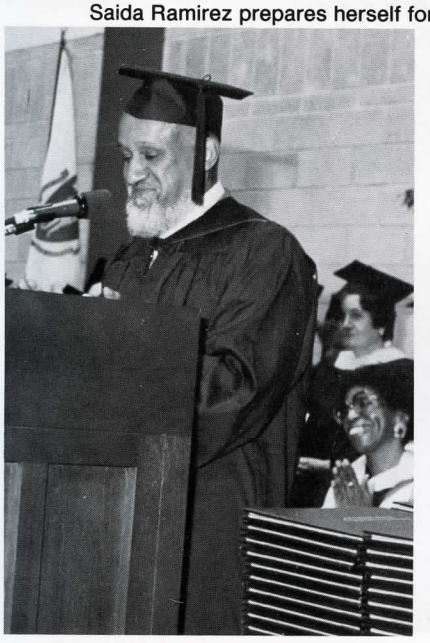

For the graduates and their families that was an experience that they will cherish for a long, long time.

From air and ground transportation to high finance, high technology, healthcare and education, IOCS provides total computer system solutions by making all systems run at their peak productivity toward a common goal—optimum efficiency.

Using the full spectrum of technological tools, IOCS creates unique solutions for private, commercial, and government customers. From systems analysis through user training, IOCS helps businesses manage information—supporting a variety of applications, from office automation to voice integration.

IOCS has received national recognition for its voice response system called VOICE-NET®—a remarkable system that allows access of computer information by using just a touch-tone telephone. Designed with flexibility in mind, VOICE-NET is being used on a local, regional, and national basis providing callers with accurate up-to-the-minute information.

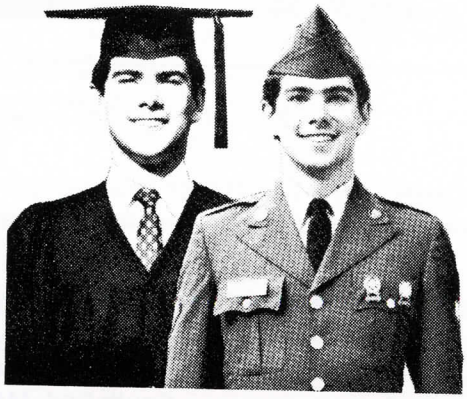

Founded in 1969, IOCS is today one of New England's largest minority owned companies. Headquartered in Waltham, MA, IOCS is the leader in computer software and systems integration with a history of outstanding performance. A pioneering organization since its inception, IOCS remains on the leading edge of several technologies that are vital in today's society.

Talk to the company that can make your computer systems work as one. At IOCS, we make all systems go.

McDonald's and the UNCF. Helping people graduate to better opportunities.

A college education can mean all the difference in the world. It can open minds and open doors to great opportunities. McDonald's restaurants recognize this and have become a large contributor to the United Negro College Fund.

It's a way of giving something back and making a difference in the lives of people right in the community. Today and everyday, McDonald's restaurants are proud to support the UNCF.
